Dear Edith:

I enclose a sample of the insulting letters I have been receiving from our mother. I do not intend to answer it or write her any more letters.

I know just how she is, and she could come home if she chooses and I would go after her, but I believe she is merely carrying out plans made before she left.

If she was really sick, that is true, I would spend my last cent on her, but as it is she could be home, and I would manage to get the work done, as I have before. We all feel as though we would like to do nothing but rest, some times, I suppose, but think fortune means not all so selfish.

I have forgotten your address so will send to Evans, and they can forward.
Hope this will build you well and (P. 7.) Nabel.

I feel that what my opinion of her is better left unsaid, so I send the letter without any comments.

The next Dr. Sheppard, against my wishes and under the circumstances I have done more than I should have done
